

Recipes of Ill Repute

David Fisher

June 14, 2015

I ran across a recipe book
Called 'Cuisine For Clientele',
On the cover was an unchaste cook
Making prosti-soup and broth-el.

On the back it stated that 'Eating
Is the most human obsession.
Bar for the one that bears repeating;
The world's oldest profession.'

At first look I was taken aback,
But placed it in my hand cart.
Then at home found it was amply stacked
With cocottes and luscious tarts.

In no time flat, I got courageous
When I summoned up the nerve.
To prepare from the worn pages,
A plate of red-hot, whore-d'oeuvres.

Followed by the main course of shell fish;
A meal fit for baronets.
For ours and the books paramount dish,
Are fresh trollops on strumpets.

Sure it's true that most of the recipes
May seem sexist and campy,
But don't fear, coz two of its specialties
Are beef cake and pimp scampi.

For dessert we hope our guests have fun
When they wrestle for Jello.
They say it's the best under the sun,
Though born from a Bordello.

Aroused guests always leave satisfied,
Although some try to be cute.
Yet failed no matter how hard they've tried
Matching my book of ill repute!