

Woman in the Window

by Joyce Carile

Sitting stone like
behind the wide white slates of your horizontal prison.

Cars race by
to shopping
to a soccer game
to home
leaving behind
their sooty grime.

Silence shattered
by hourly chimes
falls to the floor
like November leaves.